- Marginal workers (worked less than six months): 119

Detailed gender breakdown for marginal workers is not separately published for the village.

Notes on Unemployment

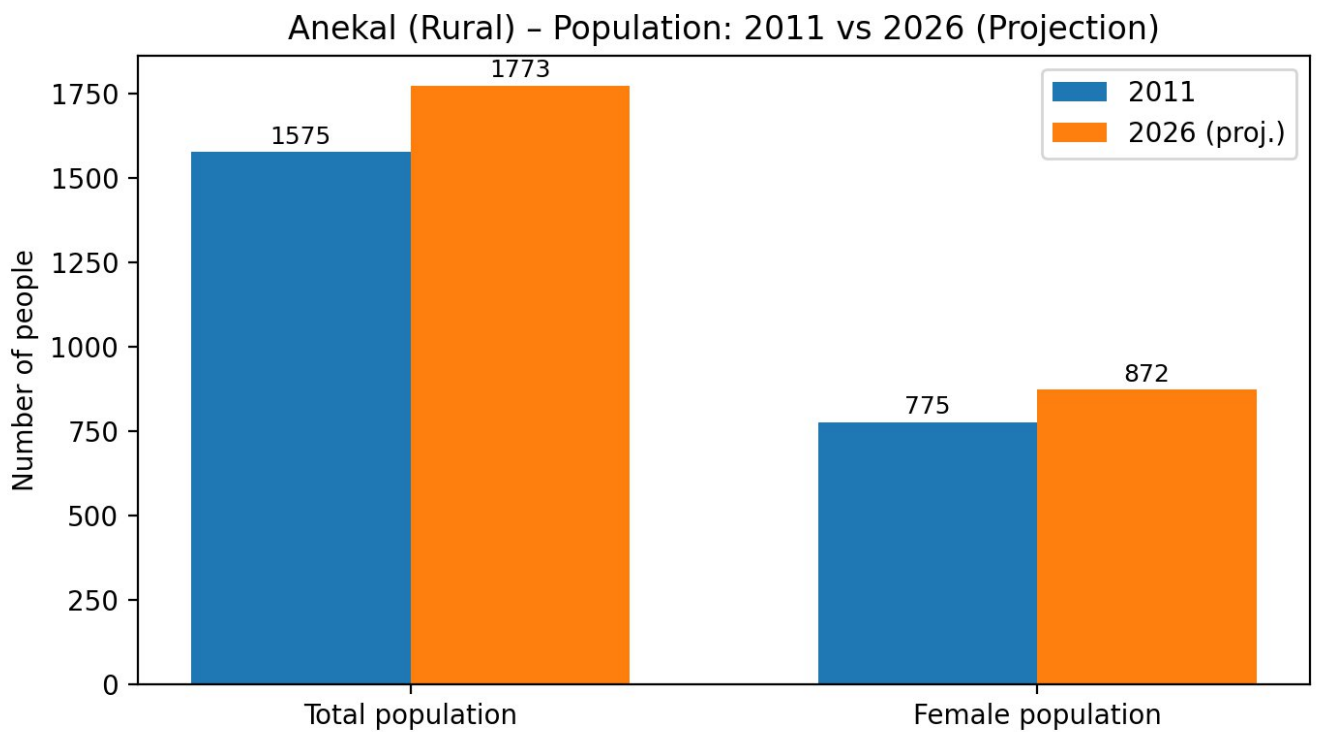

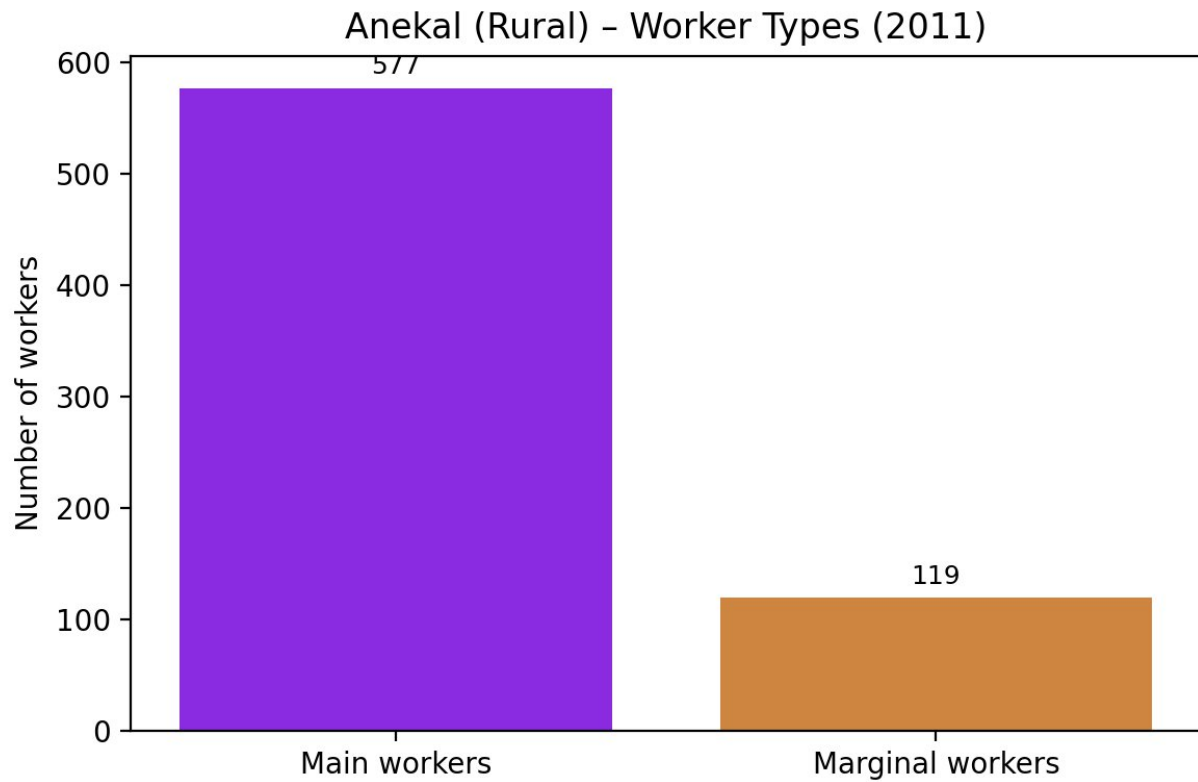

The Census does not provide an official unemployment rate at the village level. Instead, workforce data show how many people are engaged in work versus those classified as non-workers. Non-workers include people who are not formally employed, such as students, homemakers, unpaid family helpers, retirees, or others not engaged in documented work. Because many women are listed as non-workers relative to their total population, this suggests lower formal participation in documented employment among women in rural areas like Anekal (Rural).

Summary Table

Indicator	Value
Total Population	1,575
Female Population	775
Female Literacy	55.87%
Total Workers	696
Female Workers	222
Female Share of Workforce	~31.9%

This suggests women represented around 21% of the total recorded working population.

Detailed breakdown of work types for women and men (such as main vs marginal work, cultivator vs labourer) is not separately published at the village level in the available source.

Notes on Unemployment

The official Census does not publish a specific unemployment rate at the village level. Instead, it records participation in work activities. A large number of people not recorded as workers could include:

- Students
- Homemakers
- People engaged in unpaid family work
- Unskilled or informal work not captured in formal categories

Because a majority of women of working age may not be listed as workers in census data, this implies that many women in the village either do not participate in formal employment or are engaged in informal/unrecorded work.

Summary Table (2011 Census)

Indicator	Value
Total Population	1,374
Female Population	658
Sex Ratio	~918 females per 1000 males
Literacy Rate	64.63%
Female Literacy Rate	54.86%
